A Feature Documentary Film by Emmy Award Winner Brian Schodorf

Chicago at the Crossroad opens a rare historical window into the systematic creation of communities in American cities designed to strategically segregate cities by race. And how does a city heal from the decades of heartbreak and pain? A feature documentary filmed over the course of 15 years, Chicago at the Crossroad answers those questions, offering a penetrating look at the incessant segregation, violence and disastrous public policy decisions that affect Chicago and cities across the country to this day.
